summary for the benefit of your many

This commission met in New Orleans on December 2, 1878, and was composed of

(with one exception), and those having the homoopathic physicians living in the South la: gest experience. Many of these gentlemen had been educated in both schools, and were well fitted for their position. Their object was to make a most searching investigation to get at the whole truth and publish it to methods and remedies of the old system.

vellow-fever but not the number of cases.

To bring the mortality down as low as 10 per cent. there must have been 9,200 cases-about as many people as were left in the city. The homocopathic mortality in that city was 5 6-10 per cent. In New Orleans the Board of Health report 23,540 cases, with a mortality of 4.056, or a percentage of 17 2-10. In that city there were 1,945 cases treated homœopathically, with 110 deathsand under-a mortality of more than 50 per long list of drugs, besides blood-letting, leeching, and blistering, ice-packs and cold effusions. The homeopaths having a law to guide them showed a remarkable similarity in their practice. Three medicines for the first stage of the disease and three for the medicines, administered in very small doses, often repeated, acted like water dropping
